

If it can't run two weeks without you, a buyer prices that in.

Run by a crew that doesn't need you, the same business is a different listing. A trades business that depends on its owner sells at the low end of the range; with a crew lead, written procedures and clean numbers, a full turn higher. On $300,000 of owner earnings, one turn is a year of profit, decided by how the business runs, not by how hard you worked.*

For trades and home-services owners one to three years from selling.

2 to 3x

when it still depends on you*

3 to 4x

same trade, managers in place*

1 year

of profit: that gap on $300,000*

*2026 broker-published ranges for HVAC, plumbing and contracting, as a multiple of owner earnings (CT Acquisitions; Reins). Your books decide.

The build: six things a buyer checks, each one dated

- ✓ Phones answered. Every call picked up, booked or routed, logged. Live by week 2.
- ✓ Bids out the same day. Your format, your rates, written by your crew. Week 3.
- ✓ Operations manual. The jobs only you know, written down in one place. Week 8.
- ✓ Standards. What a finished job looks like, by trade and crew, one page each. Week 6.
- ✓ Reporting you don't build. Jobs, bids, win rate, margin, cash, every week. Week 6.
- ✓ Crew trained, then the test. You take two weeks off; we fix what reached you. Day 90.

Already built for trades owners

- ✓ Wolf & Wolf, roofing. A bid writer built from 745 of Chris Wolf's own bids, priced to a 4.7% median error against his history, installed on a 20-minute call. "This was a very easy process."
- ✓ Nate, electrician. Had hardly touched AI. After a 90-minute training, "it probably cuts my average proposal time in half." Built the proposal for a $120,000 contract he won.

This week, free

Forward your phone to your lead for one full day. Write down every call that still reached you, and why. That list is your first procedure.

The next step

A 20-minute call. Bring last month's bids and the week you'd most like off. You leave knowing which of the six is costing you the most, and the number.

Best fit, at a glance

Trades or home services

Selling in 1 to 3 years

A crew of three or more

You still answer the phone

Investment: $10,000 to 15,000. Larger scopes to $30,000. Scoped in writing before we start.

You leave with all six in writing, or we keep building at no extra charge until you do.
